ABSTRACT

Clay sculpture is a traditional Chinese folk art. Clay sculpture has the appearance characteristics of beautiful shape, realistic image, bright color, showing a strong sense of life. 2005, by the China Folk Arts and Crafts Association of colored sculpture professional committee identification, at present retains the inheritance of a hundred years of history, and inherited more than three generations of colored sculpture art a total of thirteen, which comes from the five northwestern provinces of Shaanxi Fenxiang clay sculpture and inheritance of the Yang family clay sculpture in Ningxia has been nearly 200 years, showing the The Yellow River Basin has a long and heavy cultural heritage. The culture of mud sculpture in the Yellow River basin has a long history. Ningxia Yang Clay Sculpture is a unique clay craft in Ningxia Hui Autonomous Region. Yang clay sculpture was born in the Yang family of Yang Po Village, Wenbao Township, Longde County, with rich connotation, good at expressing religious ideals and life emotions through artistic idol modeling, and has high research value in folklore, history and culture. Yang clay sculpture has a history of nearly 200 years since its birth, and is an excellent national folk art inherited through the wisdom and creativity of several generations, with a strong level of traditional statue-making art. In the long process of development and evolution, Yang clay sculpture has formed a unique style of clay sculpture different from that of other regions, presenting a unique spiritual temperament. Through the method of literature survey and interviews, this paper studies the works and technical development of Yang clay sculpture after 1980, focuses on the works and craft characteristics of the representative inheritors of Yang clay sculpture of the fourth, fifth and sixth generations, summarizes the important achievements developed and obtained by Yang clay sculpture, and comes to the conclusion that Yang's clay sculpture has the technical characteristics of unique skills, colorful diversity, and strict standardization. Through in-depth exploration and understanding of this ancient art, it is also possible to better transmit and develop this valuable intangible cultural heritage.

1. Introduction

Clay sculpture is a traditional Chinese folk art. It is a folk handicraft that uses clay as raw material and makes various images by kneading. The main production method is mixed in clay, rice husk, cotton fibre and other materials to increase the plasticity of clay, pounded well, using hand or tool kneaded into a variety of figures of clay blanks, after drying coated with primer, and then painted. Clay sculpture is commonly known as "colourful sculpture" and "clay play", and the art of clay sculpture in China can be traced back to the Neolithic period, which was 4,000 to 10,000 years ago.

Since the Neolithic period, the art of clay sculpture has been uninterrupted in China, and there is a record in the "Strategies of the Warring States Period" of making a clay puppet [7]. The folk customs of making clay figures for burial, making Buddha statues for worship, and making "playing goods" for enjoyment are the main reasons for the long-term and stable development of the art of clay sculpture in China. Clay sculpture development to the Han Dynasty has become an important art variety. Archaeologists from the two Han Dynasty tombs unearthed a large number of cultural relics, including a large number of terracotta figurines, ceramic animals, ceramic carriages, ceramic boats and so on. Among them, there are hand pinched, there are also moulded [6].

In 2005, by the China Folk Arts and Crafts Association of coloured sculpture professional committee identified, at present retains the inheritance of a hundred years of history, and the inheritance of more than three generations of coloured sculpture art of a total of thirteen, the main Tianjin "Mud People Zhang" clay sculpture, Wuxi Huishan clay sculpture, Guangdong Dawu clay sculpture, Henan clay sculpture, Shaanxi Fengxiang clay sculpture and the Ningxia Yang's Clay sculpture of the Classification. Among them, Shaanxi Fengxiang Clay Sculpture and Ningxia Yang's Clay Sculpture from the five northwestern provinces have been inherited for nearly 200 years, showing the long and heavy culture of clay sculpture from the Yellow River Basin. As the flower of Chinese folk art, mud sculpture art has long been out of the country, become the messenger of Chinese and foreign cultural exchanges, showing the world the charm of Chinese traditional folk art [2].

Yang's clay sculpture originated in the Daoguang period of the Qing Dynasty (1832), the founder Yang Kui Shan, out of his love for clay sculpture, visited many places and learnt clay sculpture from Master Liu in Fengxiang, Shaanxi Province. Shaanxi Fengxiang Painted Clay Sculpture began in the Western Zhou period of the pre-Qin Dynasty, and has been passed down to the people for over 3,000 years, making it the oldest and most ethnically distinctive handmade clay sculpture in China to this day. Yang Kui Shan completed his studies in three years, then created his own Yang's clay sculpture and passed it on to his sons, Yang Tingfu and Yang Tingbi, two brothers. Yang Weifu, the third-generation inheritor, took over the mantle of his ancestors and went to Xinjiang to continue to learn and develop the art of clay sculpture, integrating the artistic style of Western culture into the art of clay sculpture, and became quite accomplished in shaping temple views, gods, temples, and statues of Buddha. He also recruited a wide range of disciples, and his influence radiated to the surrounding areas, and people who love clay sculpture art made a living by opening workshops and operating clay sculpture business. At that time, the Yang family around the real formation of "every family will be clay, every family will be painted" pattern, the total number of workshops once reached 53 households, the total number of people making a living of more than 100 people, and the formation of men pinch molding, women, children on the color of the folk crafts production pattern, the development of Yang's clay sculpture has entered a period of its heyday. The fourth generation of Yang Qihe not only learnt and mastered the skills of clay sculpture, but also absorbed and drew on the strengths of a variety of folk art, integration, Yang's clay sculpture developed into a combination of clay sculpture, painting, woodcutting, chapter carving, paper-cutting, stamping in one of the characteristics of the colorful sculpture, the initial formation of Yang's clay sculpture of the basic style of art [3].

2. Methodology

2.1 Research Analysis

The research through the fifth generation of Yang's clay sculpture inheritor Yang Jia nian conducted a number of interviews, resulting in the representative inheritor of the Yang's clay sculpture techniques explained in detail, so as to fully grasp the points of Yang's clay sculpture techniques, and in the interviews on the huge number of Yang's clay sculpture works for the collation of Yang's clay sculpture recommended by the inheritor of the masterpiece of Yang's clay sculpture in-depth research, in order to draw a more scientific conclusions.

2.2 Literature Survey

Yang's clay sculpture has a long history. Only through sufficient investigation can it be comprehensively and systematically studied, therefore, in the research process, it is necessary to check the relevant literature, mainly the records on Yang's clay sculpture in the local records of Longde County, the relevant research results of scholars on Yang's clay sculpture and so on. Through the records of local natural and cultural resources, we can gain an in-depth understanding of the causes of Yang's clay sculptures. The Yang family has made an informative summary and organisation of the nearly 200 years of development history of Yang's clay sculptures. In 2018, the book Ningxia Yang's Colourful Sculptures was published, which contains a detailed description of the origin, development, technical characteristics, innovation and research and development of Yang's clay sculptures, which is an important documentary reference for this research [14]. In addition, it is necessary to draw on the research results of other scholars to ensure more comprehensive research.

3. Discussion

3.1 The Fourth-Generation Representative Inheritor Yang Qihe's Works and Techniques

3.1.1 Yang Qihe's career

Yang Qihe (1930-2016), the fourth-generation inheritor of Yang Clay Sculpture, played a landmark role in the development of Yang Clay Sculpture's inheritance. In the first three generations, Yang's clay sculpture was an important means of livelihood and economic source for the family. Through Yang Qihe's efforts and innovations, Yang's clay sculpture has gained social recognition, and has been inherited and developed as a folk-art form with great local characteristics.

Yang Qihe learnt the art from his father since he was a young boy, and due to his long-term exposure and talent, he was able to complete the production of a complete statue in three years' time. At the same time also mastered the wood carving, paper tie and other skills. 1975 Yang Qihe into the Longde County Museum of Culture work, the creation of the Shatang town model, Liancai Township model, Chengguan Township model, Longde County model of a number of colored sculpture models, and completed the "open mountains to create a plain", "people old three generations to learn the Dazhai", "Old Secretary", "Yang Zirong" and other colored sculpture works [14].

When he was young, Yang Qihe sought advice from many masters, worked hard, studied actively, and explored and practiced. He absorbed and drew on the characteristics of wood carving, paper cutting and other folk techniques, boldly fused with his clay art creation, so Yang Qihe is not only good at clay sculpture, in the wood carving, chapter carving, theatre costumes, etc., also has a fairly high attainments, can be called the folk-art masterpiece. His works reflect the folk customs of the Liupan Mountain area, creating a visually rich folk-art form and style of Yang's clay sculptures [1].

In 1980, Yang Qihe came to Kongdong Mountain in Pingliang City, Gansu Province by chance. Kongdong Mountain is said to be the place where Emperor Xuanyuan, the founder of the Chinese humanities, asked for knowledge of Taoism and Buddhism, and it is a holy place for Taoism and Buddhism in Northwest China. According to historical records, Kongdong Mountain in the Tang Dynasty, there are monks, Taoist priests have created monasteries and palaces, and then, through the Song Dynasty, Yuan Dynasty, Ming Dynasty, Qing Dynasty, until the Republic of China, the successive generations have been built or rebuilt. According to historical records, the heyday, Palace of the Buddha's temple up to 42, more than 650 houses. The important ones are "eight platforms, nine palaces and twelve courtyards". Yang Qihe first invited to Kongdong Mountain, found that the statues built over the generations has been dilapidated, he lamented the dilapidation of historical relics, determined to complete the restoration of cultural relics in Kongdong Mountain. From 1980 to 1984, over a period of four summers, Yang Qihe completed the Kongdong Mountain Huangcheng Taishang Temple, Zhenwu Ancestor Hall, Xiangshan Guan and other temples in the cultural relics restoration work, in 1984, the Kongdong Mountain Taoist Management Institute for thanks to its outstanding contribution to the cultural relics restoration of the Kongdong Mountain statues, specially presented the "top technology" This banner is also the first banner given to the clay artisans since the establishment of the People's Republic of China, which has precious historical value [14].

During the four years of statue restoration in Kongdong mountain, yang qihe's second son yang adult and fourth son yang jianian also joined the statue restoration work, in the restoration work for many years, learnt the family craft, and gradually grew into a unique craftsman. 1986, yang qihe led his fourth son yang jianian to taitong mountain, guiding yang jianian to complete the restoration of the bodhisattva hall, the temple of the god of the city of the restoration of a total of 12 statues, especially the treatment of clothing pattern, facial carving, etc, all done by yang alone, the fifth generation of yang's clay sculpture inheritor growth and maturity mark. Especially in the treatment of clothing patterns, facial carving, etc., all completed by Yang jianian alone, the restoration of cultural relics is the fifth generation of Yang's clay sculpture inheritor of the growth of an important symbol of maturity, showing Yang's clay sculpture in the field of cultural relics restoration of the inheritance of the characteristics of the generation [11].

In 2009, Yang Qihe was invited to Kongdong Mountain again to undertake the restoration of more than 600 sculptures in the Mixed Yuan Pavilion, which is said to have been built in the Tang Dynasty and destroyed during the Tongzhi period of the Qing Dynasty, and was rebuilt by the Kongdong Mountain Management Bureau in 2003 with the opportunity of "restoring monuments and ruins, and constructing humanistic landscapes"

In September 2009, Yang Qihe, who was 79 years old at the time, led his four sons Yang Jianian and his grandsons Yang Xianxiong and Yang Xianlong to establish a design team to enter the Hunyuan Pavilion in Kongdong Mountain and begin the restoration work of the painted sculptures inside the pavilion. In 2013, the sculpture project of the Hunyuan Pavilion, which took four years, was completed. This work became Yang Qihe's masterpiece and farewell work, as well as a significant contribution to the development of Yang's clay sculpture.

3.1.2 Significant achievements of Yang Qihe

The sculpture restoration of Mixed Yuan Pavilion is not only the main art work of Yang Qihe, but also a monument of Yang's clay sculpture, which has a very high artistic achievement and historical and cultural value. Mixed Yuan Pavilion looks like a tower from afar, close up for the building, the shape of the structure for the large three-storey, the actual internal five-storey, plus the underground part of a total of seven floors. According to the unique structure of the pavilion, after repeated deliberations, Yang Qihe as the main member of the Yang's clay sculpture design team to determine the "ask the Tao", "the group of immortals to come to the court", "the opening of the heavens and earth" three parts of the clay sculpture "Three parts of the clay sculpture design and production programme [14].

Located on the first and second levels of the Mixed Pavilion, the Ask the Yellow Emperor chapter is based on clay sculptures, supplemented by glass fibre reinforced plastic and wood carvings, to portray the most widely known legend of Kongdong Mountain - "The Yellow Emperor's Ask the Tao". The story is about the ancient immortal Guang Cheng Zi driving a crane to Kongdong Mountain, only to see lush forests, verdant valleys, the Jing River and the Rouge River flowing around the mountain like two veins, the mountains are beautiful and picturesque, so he stayed down to nourish his spirit and transform his qi. The Oriental Yellow Emperor Xuanyuan heard that Guangchengzi lived in Kongdong Mountain, despite the distance of 10,000 miles, all the way to come to worship the master to ask for the method of governing the world.

The sculpture consists of the combination sculpture of "The Yellow Emperor Asking for the Tao", "Kongdong Scenic Scene" shallow relief sculpture, and "Sixty Jiazi Gods" round sculpture, covering relief, round sculpture, mural and other forms. In the process of colourful sculpture, it follows the historical allusion, and flexibly applies the production methods of relief and round sculpture in the limited space indoors to carry out the creation, which comprehensively demonstrates the windy and stormy course of the Yellow Emperor's asking for the Tao.

The combination sculpture of "The Yellow Emperor Asking for the Tao" consists of six round sculptures, four reliefs and a mural. The combination sculptures unify the solemnity of Guangchengzi and the righteousness of the Yellow Emperor through the modelling, dynamics and colours of clay sculptures in each form of statues, thus forming a solemn and magnificent style [9].

The Kongdong Scenic Spectacle" shallow relief carving is 3.6m long and 2.1m high, located on the screen behind Guangchengzi's round carving, and embodies the humanities and natural landscape of Kongdong Mountain with many buildings, rocks, trees, clouds, birds, etc. through the scattering perspective, and the carvings of the borders are elegant and smooth, and the use of purple sandalwood colors reveals the nobility of the temperament.

The round sculpture of "Sixty Jiazi Gods" is a single clay sculpture between 0.9m-1.2m, with a large size, which is a concentration of Yang's clay sculpture and statue art achievement. Stem and Branch Calendar refers to the traditional Chinese calendar, which has been used since ancient times. Stem and Branch is the general name for the Heavenly Stems and Earthly Branches. Each of the Heavenly Stems and Earthly Branches are matched up in a certain order without repetition, and are used as the code names for the year, month, day and hour. A character from the "Heavenly Stem" is placed in the front, followed by a character from the "Earthly Branches", thus constituting a pair of Stems and Branches. If the "Heavenly Stem" starts with the character " Jia ", and the "Earthly Branches" starts with the character " Zi ", then the combination will be exactly sixty years. For a cycle, sixty years is called a jiazi, day after day, the cycle of records. This is the "stem and branch calendar". Each stem and branch calendar year has a Jiazi God, Yang Qihe close to the legend of each God of the background for the design of statues, 60 statues of different shapes, the identity of each God of the Jiazi were formed in the early years of the Qing Dynasty to the present version of the one-to-one correspondence, each God of the Jiazi is a mythological story by the real characters of the history of the artistic processing, so each character has its own character traits in the set of works, the creation of which is particularly outstanding. The creation of this set of works is particularly outstanding, and the works have a strong ornamental value and artistic effect [14].

3.1.3 Overview of Yang Qihe's "Sixty Jiazi Gods" works

Located in the Mixed Yuan Pavilion on the highest peak of Kongdong Mountain in Pingliang City, Gansu Province, the 60th God is a masterpiece of Yang's clay sculpture of the Chinese Zodiac God. This set of works is large in size, consisting of two parts: the base and the statue. In order to reduce the weight and ensure stability, all the statue bases are welded with angle iron to form a strong and stable base structure, and the outside of the angle iron is fixed with a waterproof and hard bamboo plastic board and part of the fibreglass material is used to make it light and sturdy. The skeleton of the clay theme is welded with a steel frame that has been treated against rust, and then the muscles are roughly modelled using straw bundles, which are left to dry thoroughly before continuing with the clay, thus minimising the weight of the large-scale clay sculptures. The use of the skeleton to create the general outline of the clay sculpture is a unique technique and a special feature of Yang's clay sculptures.

The creation of this set of sixty jiazi gods is strictly in accordance with the tradition, the identity of each jiazi gods were formed in the early years of the Qing Dynasty to the present day version of the one-to-one correspondence, each jiazi god is a mythological story art processing by the real existence of historical characters, so each character has its different character traits, in the creation of the set of works, the display of the particularly outstanding. Yang's clay sculpture of the fourth generation of inheritors Yang Qihe closely linked to the origin of the god and the background of the legend, the identity of each character, personality traits and physical characteristics of the meticulous study, after rigorous design and repeated refinement of the final design draft, the design of the final design, by the clay modeling are men's image, but the expression of extremely rich in age there are white bearded old man has a clean-shaven young man in the identity of the valiant In the identity of the brave generals and elegant scribes, in the posture of the majestic sitting statues and dignified standing statues, in the expression of both happy smile and angry eyes, a variety of clothing and magic weapons and add more details for the clay sculpture, sixty clay sculptures closely arranged in the same indoor space, not only no similarity to the same feeling, on the contrary, it is felt that the clay sculpture form of realism, staggered, with a strong ornamental value and artistic effect. It has strong ornamental value and artistic effect [10].

The tone of the work is more festive, the pair of cold and warm colors is stronger, the colors are mainly red, green, blue, yellow, black and white, the color combination is bright and harmonious, the visual effect is very eye-catching, especially in a lot of details in the part of the use of the leaching powder technique for the surface of the clay sculpture to increase the three-dimensionality, which makes the visual effect stronger, all the clay sculptures are in the dress using the technique of gold stickers in clothing patterns, armor belts, and other parts of the body have a large number of gold sticker effect using the gold adding makes the overall color more glittering and bright. There is a large number of gold effects used, the addition of gold makes the overall color more glittering, bright and vivid.

3.1.4 Characteristics of Yang Qihe's technique

Elder Yang Qihe is a master artist with a wealth of experience and profound attainments. He is not only proficient in traditional clay sculpture techniques, but is also able to combine his experience and insights in other fields of art to create more individual and innovative works. His works not only have a unique style in terms of form, but also show exceptional talent and creativity in the use of colour and stylistic design. Elder Yang Qihe's artistic achievements are not only reflected in his exquisite skills and colourful works, but more importantly in his understanding of art and his perception of life. Through his clay works, he conveys his thoughts and feelings about life, nature and humanity, which gives his works a deeper connotation and emotional expression.

After a long period of time, he is not only proficient in clay sculpture, but also in wood carving, paper-cutting, theatre costume making and other artistic skills. This cross-disciplinary versatility has led to great diversity and inclusiveness in his skills in clay modelling, resulting in a unique technical identity [3].

Yang Qihe demonstrates a deep sense of heaviness in his clay sculpture art. His large-scale clay modelling requires the figures to be full and heavy, striving to create a real and strong sense of oppression. This is especially evident in his modelling of military generals. Yang Qihe has a deep understanding of the character's muscle trend and skin texture, he is good at capturing the dynamics of the human body and the fullness of the muscles, will be the athletic posture and smooth and healthy muscles against each other. In his works, the figures of military generals are robust and full, as if rooted in the earth, showing a sense of heaviness like mountains. This sense of heaviness is not only reflected in the sculpture of figures, but also in the momentum and expressiveness of his sculptures. Through the pursuit of the sense of gravity, his works are more full of tension and momentum, making the viewer not only feel the power and impact of the works, but also deeply understand the historical and cultural connotations contained therein. The display of this sense of gravity not only enhances the expressive power and artistic influence of the works, but also highlights Yang Qihe's unique insights and creative style in the art of clay sculpture [8].

Secondly, Yang Qihe's works are highly artistic. Yang's clay sculptures have strict requirements for the craftsmanship of the works, however, Yang Qihe's clay sculptures have transcended the pure pursuit of craftsmanship, always complementing artistry and craftsmanship. His works not only show the craftsmanship level of Yang's clay sculptures, but also highlight the artistic value and cultural connotation embedded in them. In order to avoid over-emphasis on craftsmanship, Yang Qihe does not intentionally pursue stylistic flair in the process of clay sculpture production. Instead, he skilfully incorporates a variety of traditional Chinese aesthetic ideas into his designs. For example, when shaping the folds of the figure's clothing, he adopts the traditional Chinese aesthetic concept of "Wu Dang Feng" (吴带当风), which emphasises the idea of floating in the wind. This concept emphasises the dynamics of cuffs and belts that flutter in the wind, rather than simply depicting the dynamics of the folds of the garment. This approach to design not only eliminates the artisanal feel of excessive craftsmanship, but also gives the work a more purely artistic character, demonstrating the beauty of smooth and elegant Chinese aesthetics [14].

In addition, Yang Qihe's clay sculptures are both sculptural and painterly, and they complement each other with vivid colours. Considering that most of his works are displayed indoors, Yang Qihe deliberately enhances the brightness and vividness of the colours he uses. In the selection of pigments, he has been insisting on using traditional mineral pigments for many years, which have the characteristics of strong covering power, corrosion resistance and weather resistance. He is very good at using mineral pigments to create rich layers of colours, and using the combination of warm and cold colours to form a rich and brilliant colour sensation.

3.2 Fifth-Generation Representative Inheritor Yang Jiainian's Works and Techniques

3.2.1 Yang Jianian 's career

Yang Jianian is the fourth son of Yang Qihe, and also the only son who fully inherits the family's colourful sculpture, as the fifth generation of Yang's clay sculpture inheritor, playing a key role in the inheritance of Yang's clay sculpture. When he was young, due to the poor conditions of his family, he had a vague concept of the family craft and was not in a position to learn it systematically. When he was 12 years old, his father, Yang Qihe, according to the requirements of the Longde County Museum of Culture, used the clay sculpture technique to make a sand table of the Longde County planning, lakes and grasslands, high-rise buildings and streets are made of clay, he deeply felt the charm of Yang's clay sculpture, and therefore made up his mind to inherit the family's learning from the art.

His father was very supportive of Yang Jianian's idea of learning the art, starting from copying the drawings, and providing detailed analyses of all aspects of the characters, modelling, and colors, Yang Jianian quickly entered into the state of learning the art of clay sculpture under his father's guidance. 1982, at the age of 18, Yang Jianian followed his father to the Kongdong Mountains in Pingliang City, Gansu Province, to carry out restoration of cultural relics of the thousand-year-old clay sculptures, and during the three years of his work, he learned as he went along, and was able to work with the strong and powerful clay sculptures in his own right. During the three years he worked here, he learnt as he went along, and driven by a strong sense of national mission and noble moral qualities, he completed the restoration of a number of statues. In the process, he was deeply inspired by his father, Yang Qihe, and laid the foundation for the inheritance of his skills.

In the process of art for decades, Yang Jianian has always continued to learn and self-improvement, under his leadership, the Yang Clay Sculpture is also along with the development of the times, with the times, on the basis of inheritance of traditional skills continue to innovate, not only the craft is becoming more mature, but also a wide variety of subject matter. At the same time, he has also made a greater contribution to the inheritance of the skills of the next generation of the Yang family, to Yang Xianlong, Yang Xianqi, and other sixth-generation inheritors of the clay sculpture skills and experience, to help the growth of the younger generation.

Through long-term practice and extensive creation, Yang Jianian established his leading position in the Yang family clay sculpture. Yang Jianian is currently a national representative inheritor of Yang's clay sculpture, a member of the China Folk Artists Association, the China Arts and Crafts Association, the Color Sculpture Professional Committee of the China Folk Artists Association, a member of the Ningxia Folk Artists Association, a researcher of the Guanlong Folk Research Association, a first-class arts and crafts master in Ningxia, the vice chairman of the Guyuan Folk Arts Association, the vice chairman of the Longde County Folk Arts Association, and a visiting expert at the training base of Ningxia Art Vocational College. He has won many honorary titles such as Outstanding Inheritor of Chinese Folk Culture, National Outstanding Folk Artist, Guyuan model worker, etc [14].

3.2.2 Development achievements of Yang Jianian

Under the guidance of his father, Yang Jianian's artistic footsteps have covered a wide range of forms, including clay sculpture, murals, color painting and other forms. Under his father's guidance, he mastered the practical skills and theoretical knowledge of his family's clay sculpture techniques, and his long-term practical work honed his ability and experience in large-scale colorful statues. between 1982 and 1984, he completed more than 600 statues at the Kongdong Mountain in Pingliang City, Gansu Province, in terms of their arrangement, detailing, physical design, coloring of costumes and detailed planning. These works are not only milestones in Yang's clay sculpture in the restoration of cultural relics, but also masterpieces of Yang Jianian's fledgling career.

Yang Jiainian's work, Twelve Zodiac Gods, emphasizes the use of composite colors in its coloring, using a combination of flat paint and halo, a facial coloring technique that is a major step forward in the development of Yang's clay sculptures' use of color. The twelve signs of the Chinese zodiac are a traditional Chinese folk cultural symbol, which consists of the rat, ox, tiger, rabbit, dragon, snake, horse, goat, monkey, rooster, dog, and pig, and each sign of the zodiac has a unique meaning and symbol. Yang Jianian's work "Twelve Zodiac Gods" is based on the appearance and character traits of the animals in the Chinese Zodiac. The wit and wisdom of the Rat, the heroic and steady Ox, the mighty and solemn Tiger, the lively and cute Rabbit, the dignified and solemn Dragon, the dexterity and intelligence of the Snake, the dignified and playful Horse, the kindness and gentleness of the Sheep, the vivacity of the Monkey, the head-raising and crowing of the Rooster, the simplicity and composure of the Dog, and the auspiciousness and wealth of the Pig, are fully displayed, expressing the Chinese Zodiac symbols and expressing the meaning and symbols of each of them [1]. In 2007, as a representative work of Ningxia Intangible Cultural Heritage, "Twelve Zodiac Gods" was selected for the "National Intangible Cultural Heritage Rescue and Protection Achievements Exhibition"; in April of the same year, the work was awarded the Excellence Prize of the First Ningxia Arts and Crafts Masters' Works Selection; and in March 2010, the colorful plastic work "Twelve Zodiac Gods" was selected for the "National Intangible Cultural Heritage Rescue and Protection Achievements Exhibition" [14].

Yang Jianian's representative works of art also include "Li Bai Goes to Jiangnan", "Deer and Crane Live Together", and "Wu Song Strikes the Tiger", which demonstrate his profound attainments in the field of Yang's clay sculptures.

3.2.3 Overview of Yang Jianian's "Twelve Zodiac Gods" works

Compared with "Sixty Jiazi Gods", "Twelve Zodiac Gods" is also the subject of Zodiac Gods, but the scale and volume of the work is smaller, the set of twelve clay sculptures, the twelve Zodiac Gods are all male statues, and they are all seated figures, but there is no historical figures in the design of the figures to correspond to each other, and more based on the character traits of the animals in the Chinese zodiac represented by each Zodiac God for the creation of the art. The use of artistic creativity to anthropomorphize the animal images of the twelve zodiac signs, according to the image characteristics of each zodiac sign and temperament style of the character design of different shapes, such as the image of the Dragon God for a middle-aged man in full bloom, dressed in orange robes, kind face, holding a golden dragon, fully in line with the people's anthropomorphism of the dragon's imagination; and such as the dog God's image is a simple and steady middle-aged man, wearing a green robe, a soft look, the left hand in the dragon, the dog's image is a simple and steady man, dressed in green robes, a soft look, the left hand in the dragon's hand. The image of the Dog God is a simple and steady middle-aged man, wearing a green robe, with a soft look and his left hand caressing a small dog, showing the image of a family man and a kind-hearted character to the fullest [1]. Each of the twelve zodiac gods is holding an animal image corresponding to the zodiac sign they represent. Compared with the solemn "Sixty Jiazi Gods", this set of works is more lively and friendly, which not only retains the majesty of the god statue, but also contains the simple emotions of the folk, which is very harmonious and lovely.

The set of works of the color of the overall calm atmosphere without losing the gorgeous, in the hue of red, green, blue, black and other colors, mainly in color matching is divided into splashy and bold, many contrasting colors, such as red and green with, blue and orange, yellow and purple with, in the middle of the color of the interval and articulation of the vivid and colorful, there is no contrast caused by the overly strong sense of irritation, on the contrary, for the work added a More intense visual effect, highlighting the Yang's clay sculpture unique colorful, contrasting color style [10]. In 2007, "Twelve Zodiac Gods" as the representative work of Ningxia intangible cultural heritage was selected as "National Intangible Cultural Heritage Rescue and Protection Achievements Exhibition"; in April of the same year, the work was awarded the first Ningxia Arts and Crafts Masters Selection of Excellence Award; in February 2009, Yang's clay sculpture of the fifth generation of Yang Jianian and the sixth generation of the inheritance of Yang Xianxiong, Yang Xianqi to participate in the People's Republic of China by the Ministry of Culture, fourteen ministries and commissions jointly organized by the "China's intangible cultural heritage of traditional skills exhibition" series of activities, this activity is the largest since the founding of new China, the most comprehensive exhibition of non-legacy skills display activities. China academy of art collection of this exhibition works "twelve zodiac god", "ningxia daily" successively; twice to "yang's colorful plastic debut of the traditional exhibition of non-heritage" and "yang's colorful plastic non-heritage exhibition returned with honors, nearly 20 pieces of work by the national collection" as the title of the report. It can be seen that "Twelve Zodiac Gods" is a fine masterpiece of Yang's clay sculpture, with high artistic value and research value [14].

3.2.4 Characteristics of Yang Jianian's technique

Yang Jianian is quite accomplished in clay sculpture and color painting. Under the guidance of his father, Yang Qihe, he has mastered both the theoretical knowledge and application of Yang's clay sculpture, and in the course of long-term practical creation, he has the ability to create both large-scale clay sculptures as well as delicate and interesting small pieces of artwork.

Yang Jianian's early style was very similar to that of his father's generation, adopting the traditional modeling techniques, with a dignified and stable figure, exquisite craftsmanship, and rich colors. With the continuous accumulation and improvement in practice, he combined the techniques of other clay sculpture categories and modern sculpture production techniques, and constantly enriched his own clay modeling techniques, so that Yang Jianian's clay sculpture figure modeling in the physical changes and breakthroughs, especially in the creation of small-scale clay artifacts, the formation of the shape of the spirit and the body of the characteristics of the vivid, and the subject matter is more extensive, and the treatment of the details is more and more complete [3].

Yang Jianian's works include not only traditional folkloric characters and historical figures, but also the portrayal of daily life scenes, with an eclectic range of expressions, and he is especially good at adding appropriate forms of exaggeration to the realistic approach, making the characters more evocative in their stylistic design, and significantly improving their artistry compared to the past, with a sense of honesty and spontaneity. The formation of these technical characteristics has laid a solid foundation for the development and inheritance of Yang's clay sculpture in the new era [4].

3.3 The Sixth Generation Representative Inheritor Yang Xianlong's Works and Techniques

3.3.1 Yang Xianlong's career

Yang Xianlong has been nurtured by the art of clay sculpture in the Yang's family since he was a child, and in his childhood games, he used to fabricate small animals with clay from time to time. Under the caring guidance of his grandfather Yang Qihe, he gradually developed a strong interest in Yang's clay sculptures passed down by the family. He tried to participate in the production of Yang's clay sculpture from time to time, and showed great talent and comprehension ability, and soon he was able to complete some basic clay sculpture production by himself, and his grandfather, Yang Qihe, also praised his production ability, and the affirmation from many parties greatly enhanced Yang Xianlong's determination and confidence in systematically learning Yang's clay sculpture.

In 1998, Yang Xianlong assisted his grandfather Yang Qihe to complete the work of a temple of the God of Fortune in the township of Wenbao, he boldly and independently undertook the work of shaping a 2-meter-high statue of Guan Ping, Guan Ping statue of more details, clothing lines, trivial, difficult to produce, but Yang Xianlong still with a high degree of enthusiasm to complete the statue's production. Despite the shortcomings of the statue, his grandfather Yang Qihe was very pleased to keep the statue and asked Yang Xianlong to use this first statue, which he completed alone, as a reference for future creations, and to improve his skills through constant comparison and reference. It was due to his grandfather Yang Qihe's continuous encouragement and guidance that Yang Xianlong took an important step in his career [12].

Since then, Yang Xianlong has been constantly thinking about the innovative design and inheritance development of the family skills, not only through the active exhibition of Yang's clay sculpture works in various cities to increase the popularity of Yang's clay sculpture, but also participated in cultural relics restoration and cultural relics reproduction work around the world many times, and constantly explored the way of breakthroughs of Yang's clay sculpture skills in practice. At the same time, Yang Xianlong has also cooperated with a number of higher vocational colleges and universities in Ningxia Hui Autonomous Region to attract more young people to understand and master this unique and charming art through the method of entering into campus and classroom of colorful sculpture art [8]. In addition to this, Yang Xianlong's theoretical level is extremely high, and he has made a large contribution to the construction of the theoretical system of Yang's clay sculpture, publishing many professional papers such as "Artistic Characteristics and Cultural Inheritance of Yang's Colored Plastic Sculpture", "Reflections on the Restoration Methods of Clay Cultural Relics", and "The Inheritance and Present Situation of Longde's Yang's Colored Plastic Sculpture", and in 2018, he published the book "Yang's Colored Plastic Sculpture in Ningxia", which will systematically organized [14].

Yang Xianlong is constantly devoted to the innovation and development of Yang's clay sculptures and has made many achievements. Yang Xianlong is now the representative inheritor of Yang's clay sculpture at the regional level, and a senior craft artist. He is a member of China Folk Literature and Artists Association, a member of Color Sculpture Committee of China Folk Literature and Artists Association, a member of China Arts and Crafts Association, and a master of arts and crafts of the autonomous region. He is the vice president of Ningxia Arts and Crafts Association, part-time professor and arts and crafts consultant of Ningxia Art Vocational College, part-time professor of Art and Design College of Ningxia Vocational and Technical College, and consultant of Master Studio.

3.3.2 Development achievements of Yang Xianlong

Yang Xianlong has been nurtured by his family since childhood, and under the guidance and instruction of his grandfather Yang Qihe, he has made many achievements in the field of clay sculpture. "Wang Lingguan" is one of Yang Xianlong's representative works, the theme is taken from myths and legends. Legend has it that Wang Lingguan was a general of the Southern Heavenly Gate, and the "General Catalogue of Gods and Immortals Throughout the Ages" says that he was the Jade Emperor's royal general, specializing in the duties of heavenly and earthly corrections. Folklore has "three eyes can observe the world affairs, a whip to wake up the world" praise. Yang Xianlong molded Wang Lingguan dressed in gold armor, eyes round, fierce face, the right hand raised the golden whip, the left hand holding the gold brick, the right foot high, the left foot on the wheel of wind and fire, the overall dynamics of taut and powerful, ready to go, reflecting the Wang Lingguan powerful and heroic image and loyalty of the heroic temperament [12].

"Zodiac and Children" is also an important masterpiece of Yang Xianlong, the work adopts a composition in which the children and the animals of the Chinese Zodiac are almost equal in size, and the children in the clay sculpture are either embracing, riding across, leaning on, or holding hands, which are closely connected with the image of the Chinese Zodiac, and the images of the children are lovely, vivid, and rounded, while the image of the Chinese Zodiac is naïve and lively, and the children are wearing traditional costumes such as tiger head hats and lapel jackets, and the colors used on the costumes all reflect the color patterns of the Chinese Zodiac. The colors used in the costumes reflect the colors and patterns of the Chinese zodiac, showing a very strong decorative effect. This work participated in the "Eighth Cross-Strait (Xiamen) Cultural Industries Fair" in 2015, and was awarded the "Chinese Excellent Works Award Silver Prize" jointly issued by the China Arts and Crafts Society, the Organizing Committee of the Cross-Strait (Xiamen) Cultural Industries Fair and the Taiwan Craftsmen Association " [14].

3.3.3 Overview of Yang Xianlong's "Zodiac and Child" works

This set of works is a small set of furnishings, although the volume is not large, but through the vivid shape of the children, bright and bold color scheme and detailed pattern design, the works are full of festive and lively atmosphere, with a strong visual impact. The work adopts the almost equal composition of children and animals of the Chinese zodiac, and the children in the clay sculpture are either embracing, riding across, leaning on, or holding hands, which are closely connected with the image of the Chinese zodiac, and the images of the children are lovely and vivid, round and full, and the image of the Chinese zodiac is naive, lively and playful, and the children are wearing traditional costumes such as tiger head hats and lapel coats, and the colors used on the costumes are all in contrast with the color patterns of the Chinese zodiac, which show a very strong decorative effect. The colors used in the costumes reflect the colors and patterns of the Chinese zodiac, showing a very strong decorative effect [13].

This set of works in the details of the depiction is particularly good, each child is wearing a different form of hat, tiger head cap, duck tongue hat, melon hat and other forms, in the shape of highlighting the interest of children at the same time also adds more color space; children's clothing is very rich in decorations, in the design of the pattern is also unique, the use of Chinese traditional auspicious symbols of the plum blossom, the lotus and other motifs, all express the Praying for good fortune and attracting wealth, avoiding calamities and driving away evil spirits, etc., the abstract art of decoration symbolizes people's good wishes for all the best. Like the parallel lotus flowers, auspicious clouds, peaches and auspicious beasts on the costumes of people, they are both decorative and folkloric in nature. The color of the design is bright and colorful, which is suitable with the cheerful expression of the child and enhances the festive atmosphere of the work; in the design of the animals of the Chinese Zodiac, this set of works not only follows the basic modeling of the animals in the traditional clay sculpture, but also combines with modern aesthetics and boldly improves it, and under the premise of retaining the basic animal image and dynamics, it combines all kinds of patterns with the animal modeling, such as depicting a fire pattern on a horse, and blue flower pattern on a sheep, etc [5]. There are not only various colors of patterns on the pig, but also copper coin patterns on its head. The Chinese zodiac sheep is depicted with blue flower pattern, etc. Especially, the pig not only has various color patterns on its body, but also has a coin pattern on its head, and the pig is artistically designed with the dynamics and expression of holding hands with a child and smiling, which is both creative and exceptionally naive and lovely.

"Zodiac and Children" in the pursuit of bold innovation in the use of color, in the inheritance of Yang's clay sculpture on the basis of the traditional use of color, but also according to the details of clothing patterns, decorative motifs and other details of the use of more diverse colors and collocation, the overall tone of the colorful is not elegant, the decorative effect of a strong, with a high ornamental value. 2014, Yang Xianlong to participate in the "Intangible Cultural Heritage of Ningxia In 2014, Yang Xianlong participated in the "Ningxia Intangible Cultural Heritage Exhibition", and the set of "Chinese Zodiac and Children" was among the exhibited works, and the works were highly praised by the then leaders of the autonomous region; the works participated in the "Eighth Cross-Strait (Xiamen) Cultural Industries Fair" in 2015, and won the award by the China Arts and Crafts Society, Cross-Strait (Xiamen) Cultural Industries Fair. Cultural Industries Fair Organizing Committee and the Taiwan Craftsmen Association jointly issued the "Chinese Excellent Works Award Silver Prize" [14].

3.3.4 Characteristics of Yang Xianlong's technique

Yang Xianlong's clay sculpture figures from life, mostly based on the design of realistic characters, mostly realistic creation techniques, especially on the facial expression of the shape of the meticulous, to achieve the effect of vivid and delicate, which also makes his clay sculpture works in the modeling of a strong realistic atmosphere, so that the audience feel comfortable and friendly.

Yang Xianlong's skill is very exquisite, and he is very precise in grasping the dynamics of the characters, which makes his seated statues calm and quiet, and his standing statues powerful and imposing. In terms of color expression, Yang Xianlong is good at using pure colors with composite colors, forming a color design with strong color contrasts and a clear distinction between primary and secondary colors [12].

Yang Xianlong's subject matter is extremely wide, and he is especially fond of depicting scenes of the people's life in Liupan Mountain area, including characters and animals, showing the strong local customs and cultural connotations. In his works, one can deeply feel the love and emotional expression of local life. 2024

In the process of learning his craft, Yang Xianlong has always focused on the combination of traditional family clay sculpture techniques and modern design aesthetics [8]. Therefore, while maintaining the characteristics of folklore, he boldly absorbed the characteristics of painting, modern sculpture and other forms of art and applied them to his clay sculpture creations. This innovation is not only manifested in the roughness and delicacy of the works, but also in the vivid and realistic gestures, the matching of pure and composite colors, and the ingenious combination of local flavor and modern aesthetic habits. These technical characteristics make his works not only inherit the tradition, but also show a unique modern artistic style [14].
